THE LEDGER ROOM

General Pitch

The film An archivist and a temporary courier have forty-eight hours to close the same depot. A clean completion releases Clara's retirement bridge payment and Jory's permanent employment. An altered housing ledger makes that signature untrue. The pursuit becomes nine linked cartons, a lawful receiving place and a record of their own compromised acts.

The experience A contained institutional drama with dry workplace wit: pleasure in competence becomes discomfort about what competence protects. The former resident who refuses to participate changes the packet. The director who authorized a flood-reserve transfer remains a person defending a public good, not an exposed mastermind.

The ending and scale Evidence reaches custody on time. Compensation is not adjudicated, the permanent job lapses and the bridge payment is held. Six sites, a focused ensemble, contemporary setting and no demolition spectacle. Complete revised AI-authored demonstration draft; actual pages and inspection limits are in the handoff.

Proposed next step A human script read and a scene-specific conversation about pacing, followed by budget and location work. No attachments or financing are represented.
