THE LEDGER ROOM

Festival Pitch

Artistic identity A contained contemporary drama about the cost of making a correction accessible. Its form follows work rather than a public revelation: labeling, lifting, reading and refusing a signature. The preserved record remains capable of supporting contradictory accounts.

Programming conversation The film could contribute to programs interested in labor, institutions, memory or intimate ensemble performance. S22 gives the affected person who declines participation an actual scene and a consequence; S48 makes a small carrier-status decision carry the employment cost.

Boundaries Bellwether and all its people and procedures are fictional. No selection, premiere status, eligibility, current deadline or endorsement is claimed. The project is a revised screenplay demonstration, not a completed film ready to submit.

Next step An artistic script read now; later a verified festival strategy based on the finished film, resources and release obligations. If discussions accompany a screening, invite archive and labor voices on their own terms. The film does not offer a simple lesson or claim to represent real residents.
